OUR OPENING SONG

*I want to wake up in the morning
Where the orange blossoms grow,
And the sun comes peeping
Into where I'm sleeping
And the song birds say hello.
I want to wander in the orange grove
As I used to long ago,
And go drifting back to Florida
Where the orange blossoms grow...*

This week's program "Positive Reflections"

Last weeks program was presented by Wayne Ivey. The program was called "Positive Reflections". The basis of the program was to stand up and tell a story about a person who inspired you in life. The only guide lines was that it could not be a family member or have a religious tie.

Wayne started by reading the definition:

The word "inspiration" comes from the Latin noun "inspiratio" and from the verb "inspirare". "Inspirare" is a compound term resulting from the Latin prefix "in" (inside, into) and the verb "spirare" (to breathe). "Inspirare" meant originally "to blow into", as for example in the sentence of the Roman poet Ovid: "conchae [...] sonanti inspirare iubet"^[1] ("he orders to blow into the resonant [...] shell"). Already in the classic Roman times, "inspirare" became to mean "to breathe deeply" and assumed also the figurative sense of "to instill [something] in the heart or in the mind of someone". Derived from that verb, the Latin noun "inspiratio" gave origin to similar words in some European languages: inspiration (English, German and French), inspiração (Portuguese), inspiración (Spanish) and ispirazione (Italian). In each of these languages, the new term assumed some particular semantic deviation, thus not reflecting exactly the original Latin meaning.

In Christian theology, the Latin word "inspirare" was already used by some Church Fathers in the first centuries to translate the Greek term "πνεύμα". When Jerome (347-420 DC), as asked for by Pope Damasus, translated the Greek text of the Holy Scripture to the language of the common people of Latium (the region of central western Italy in which the city of Rome is located), in the passage of the 2 Tim 3.16-17 he translated the Greek "θεοπνευστος" as "divinitus inspirata" ("divinely breathed into"). (In English that passage reads: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God [θεοπνευστος], and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.")

Theopneustos is rendered in the Vulgate with the Latin divinitus inspirata ("divinely breathed into"), but some modern English translations opt for "God-breathed" (NIV) or "breathed out by God" (ESV) and avoid inspiration altogether, since its connotation, unlike its Latin root, leans toward breathing in instead of breathing out. Continued on Page 3.....

Four Way Test

1. Is it the Truth?
2. Is it Fair to all concerned?
3. Will it build Goodwill and Better Friendships?
4. Will it be Beneficial to all concerned?

Rotary = Ethics R Us

Because Wayne wanted to be respectful of the time on hand each Rotarian was limited to a minutes to tell their story. Members were picked at random to talk about who the person was in their lives that inspired them to be the person they are today.

It was a great way to share stories and let the other member see a side of the person speaking that they might not know about.

There are many reasons why we are who we are. Whether it's an influence from a teacher, coach, family member, or just a friend, we all appreciate the power of inspiration and the thought that maybe we can go on to inspire other people who we touch and make them a better person in their lives.

Thanks to Ken Bronson for suggesting we do this at the meeting last week.
